

You work hard for your family and yourself

AAS

Is your hard work protected?

To protect what's yours you need a Will.

A properly written Will protects your estate for your loved ones.

Without a Will you may leave your loved ones without the inheritance you expected.

“ If we both die suddenly, the kids will go to our next of kin ”

If your will doesn't appoint guardians, your children will be placed into care

“ Now I've remarried, if I die, my new Spouse's Will can look after my Children ”

If your new Spouse changes their Will after your death, your children could be disinherited

“ I have a Will, so I've catered for my children's future ”

While they'll have your legacy, it could be unprotected if they divorce, are made bankrupt or need residential care
